Rockwell Collins presents In Tolerance with 2011 Lean Award and Mechanicals Category Supplier of the Year Award

CEDAR RAPIDS, Iowa – In Tolerance, of Cedar Rapids, Iowa, was presented with the 2011 Lean Award and the Mechanicals Category Supplier of the Year Award by Jeff Moore, senior vice president of Operations, during the Rockwell Collins's Annual Supplier Conference.

The Supplier of the Year award is an acknowledgement of significant contributions made during the year by suppliers and is based upon quality, delivery, total cost of ownership, lead time and customer service.

The LEAN Recognition ties closely to the Supplier of the Year award, recognizing manufacturers who integrate Lean principles into their operations.

“The award received on behalf of our company is a tribute to the people’s values that accomplished such a mission, “ said Robert Becker, President of In Tolerance. “Our entire team made these two awards possible. It is because everyone at In Tolerance does their best that our team can achieve these amazing results in quality delivered on time.”

Becker believes Lean principles are the key to continuous growth at the company, even as the economy faltered.

“Our Mission Statement remains at the center of these ideals of constant innovation. Our task is never done because quality, much as life itself, is at a constant incline to harness its entropy. It is an honor to receive both the “Mechanicals Supplier of the Year Award” and “Lean Award” from a company such as Rockwell Collins, whose commitment to Lean Electronics is well respected throughout the world.”
